

Extended time on the SAT, ACT, GMAT, LSAT, GRE, MCAT, and other standardized tests

Depending on the results of the evaluation, you might qualify for a range of accommodations. The most common accommodation is extra time. Other accommodations can include having a reader, permission to use a computer, a scribe, breaks, or a quiet room. Getting accommodations for standardized tests takes a long time, so it is important to reach out to a qualified psychologist as soon as you can.

Reach out today to find out more

Your Name (required)

Your Email (required)

Your Phone Number

Schedule a Free Consult